Money is sent to the Veterans Hospitals and homes to assist with Christmas and Valentine parties, to the VFW National Home of children, the Nebraska scholarship program, the Unmet Needs program for veterans and their families who have had some unexpected expenses,

Dear Community of Stratton and Hitchcock County Residents,

Last month we reached out to make the community and surrounding area aware of the present circumstances of our daily meal program through the Hitchcock County Senior Center at Grandview. We appreciate the feedback and support over the past month. Given the feedback we have received we feel that a few changes need to be made starting November 1st to help preserve the program as we continue to evaluate its future.

Beginning November 1st our tentative plan is to reduce the number of meals served each week from 5 to 3. This change will omit meals served on Monday and Friday. Meals will be served as usual Tuesday—Thursday. These changes will not affect other programs offered through the Senior Center like morning coffee Monday-Friday, F.R.O.G.S. (Tuesday and Friday at 10 a.m.) and Saturday card parties.

Please reach out to us with any questions or concerns. The phone number at the Center is 276-2661

Sincerely,

The staff and board members of Hitchcock County Senior Center

CAN-CAN COSTUME MISSING

HELP!!! Some time ago someone borrowed a can-can costume from our Melodrama costume closet and hasn't returned it. It is probably stuffed into a bag and lost in a corner of somebody's home. We are missing a black skirt with the colorful ruffles and 2 black bodysuits. One has a large green collar and the other has a red collar. It was borrowed maybe as a Halloween costume or other costumed event, but I can't remember who borrowed it. Please if you know anything about it, return the costumes to Beth Kollmorgen or someone connected to the Stratton Community Players.

THE CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

As I looked back over the Chaplain's Corner for the last several month's, I noticed that peace was mentioned in most of them. We all have a desire for peace and we all do seek peace in different ways. We all have in us an inherent desire for peace. In recent history, people thought we would have lasting peace after World War I, but due to the fact that some of our leaders made wrong judgement calls, 20 years later we were in World War II. Then people thought we would have lasting peace, but then the Korean war and it goes on and on. There is a war going on somewhere all the time. Never is there national peace.

People seek individual peace in many different ways. Maybe the next job will bring peace or, maybe getting married will bring peace or, maybe getting out of this marriage into another marriage will bring peace or, just living together will bring peace. That relaxing peace that comes after the second or third drink, maybe that will stay with me, but it never does. That sudden burst of peace that comes when "shooting up" is gone in a short while and you're just a zombie.

People seek peace in gaining wealth but there is never enough because they want just a little more. Or maybe it is gaining power over other people but there is always someone that has more power than you and peace eludes you.

People seek peace through various religions, but religion itself gives no peace. There are many, many different religions and if you study each one out, you will find that Satan is behind most. The only place that you can find real peace is in your own heart and that comes with a relationship with Jesus Christ. After Jesus died and he appeared to the disciples the first thing that he said was, "Peace be with you". Then he repeated it "Peace be with you". They were filled with joy. When he came to them he brought salvation with him and they received it and knew real peace. Peace that never left them, Peace that lasted them until the ends of their lives. They knew he would be there waiting for them when they died. He would be there for all eternity.

Confess, (tell) with your mouth that Jesus is "your" Lord, believe in "your" heart that God raised him from the dead and you will be saved. That brings the only lasting peace in the world and it is in your heart.

Richard Stahly

SCAM ALERT: Not What you Think – Millennials and Fraud by Emma Fletcher

People sometimes think scams mostly affect older adults, but reports to Consumer Sentinel tell a different story. People in their 20s and 30s, a cohort that roughly tracks the so-called Millennial generation, are 25% more likely to report losing money to fraud than people 40 and over generally,<sup>1</sup> and much more likely to report a loss on certain types of fraud.

The top five frauds to which Millennials report losing money are online shopping frauds, business imposters, government imposters, fake check scams, and romance scams. People 40+ report those same scams, too, but the data suggest that, with the exception of romance scams, Millennials may be less likely to avoid them or may encounter them more often. For example, Millennials are twice as likely as people 40+ to report losing money while shopping online. Frequently, shopping-related reports to the FTC are about items that are never delivered or aren't as advertised.

Millennials are also more likely than their older counterparts to report fraud losses on scams that promise to fix debt-related problems or that promise money through jobs, investments, or business opportunities.<sup>2</sup> Millennials are 93% more likely than people 40+ to report losing money to fake check scams, which also often look like a way to earn money.<sup>3</sup>

The likelihood of losing money is just part of the story—how much people lose is also important. The median individual amount Millennials report losing to fraud is $400, much lower than what people 40+ report.<sup>4</sup> But those individual losses add up: Millennials have reported losing nearly $450 million to fraud in just the past two years.<sup>5</sup> Of that, online shopping accounted for $71 million in reported losses, and government imposter scams were close behind, with $61 million in reported losses.

The likelihood of reporting a loss varies by how people are first contacted by a scammer, and there are age differences here, too. While phone calls are the top contact method reported for people of all ages, Millennials report losing money to phone scams at slightly lower rates than people 40+. But Millennials are more likely to report losing money to frauds that start in other ways<sup>6</sup>—most notably, Millennials are 77% more likely than their older counterparts to say they lost money to a scam that started with an email.

The most important takeaway: fraud affects every generation. If someone has contacted you to demand money or your personal information – stop. Talk to someone you trust. And check out the request.

Here are some resources to help you navigate some of the scams hitting Millennials the hardest:

Tips for online shopping: ftc.gov/onlineshopping

Watch out for bogus income offers: ftc.gov/jobs

If you spot a scam, report it to the FTC at ftc.gov/complaint.
